THE NEWS.

It will be a little too much to expect a very devout observance by adherents of the Peace Ticket, of McClellan and Pendleton, of the request of the President of the United States that Public Thanksgiving be made in all our churches and places of worship on Sunday next for the capture of Atlanta, and brilliant successes below Mobile. What have Copperheads to be thankful for? 'And yet we mistake. They can be and doubtless are grateful that Hood got away with his army, and that Richmond still holds out. Loyal men may meanwhile rejoice and devoutly accord praise to the Giver of victories for the signal successes to our arms. The strength and forces of the rebellion are being steadily and surely worn away. Their enforced and pitiless conscription does not make good the numbers of their losses, while it sills their ranks with boys and old men. Steadily the successes of our arms restricts the rebel territory, open fresh drains on rebel resources, and tighten the steel grip about the seats of its foul life. Thank God that our boys in blue still carrying the flag onward. The masterly strategy of Gen. Sherman, the splendid achievements of Admiral Farragut, have brought still nearer to the vitals of the rebel government the tightening band of our army and navy. A little further, a brief further period of daring and sacrifice, and the rebellion will fall. Its main stay is now the peace faction of the Northern States, who are redoubling their exertions and zeal to interfere and stay the progress of our arms that the Confederacy may not fall, and that slavery may be saved. Let us be grateful to Providence for the present promise of the campaign. A fulfillment of present auguries will be the utter discomfiture and ruin of the open and secret enemies of the Union within the next few months. Wisely does the President remind the people to Whom praise is due for success and its auspices, and all men will have but silly profited by the woes and sacrifices of this war, if the proclamation be not faithfully observed. National salutes were yesterday fired, in accordance with the President's orders, in honor of our recent victories

One-half of the 16th corps, under Gen. A. Smith, are on board of a fl et of steamers going up the Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee Rivers to reinforce Gen. Sherman. They may stop by the way to clean out the rebels under Wheeler and Roddy, who are disturbing the railroad between Nashville and Chattanooga. This timely reinforcement of ten or twelve thousand men, will enable Sherman to extend his operations and strike heavier blows at the enemy.

They had a good time at Galena yesterday, where Dick Oglesby and Col. Carr met a serious rally of Union men, and carried forward the work of the campaign in Illinois.

The Journal of yesterday refers to, without otherwise giving a dispatch in it states was virtually telegraphed from New York yesterday afternoon, announcing the arrival of the steamer City of Washington from Europe, bringing the intelligence that one of our cruisers had captured the rebel pirate Georgia in the British Channel. That she had a British flag flying, and her captain entered a protest, appealing to the British Government for protection. We have no further particulars, and no dispatch referring to the subject reached us over the wires last evening. The foreign advices of an earlier date than the Washington's, if that steamer arrived yesterday, reported, the strength of a Lisbon telegram of the 26th, the federal frigate Niagara was in the Tagus. It was said that her mission was to intercept a steamer bought at Liverpool ostensibly for navigation between Lisbon and Liverpool. The Portuguese papers further assert that the steamer in question did not sail, as the intention of the rebel crew had become known. This doubtless referred to the steamer Georgia, which had really left Liverpool for Lisbon. It is certain that our naval forces abroad is strong in the ports, eager to reproduce and crown the exploit of the Kearsarge, but we are not in a mood as to whether any event of that kind has yet transpired.

The rebels confess a severe repulse in the vicinity of Atlanta, and the loss of three generals, Anderson, Patten, and Hardee.

Disastrous fire in Milwaukee, on Sunday, destroyed the Black Warrior Elevator of Mess. Hugunin & Co., loss of $45,000; a loss of $10,000, in lumber to the yard of Messrs. Jones & Co., adjoining.

Advices from South America say Chili refuses to recognize the bogus Emperor Maximilian, and state that stronger relations are feared, for mutual defense, between the South American Republics.

The English authorities surrender and fugitive Mullin, has been formally surrendered to New York under the extradition treaty, and he will on his way home to London send the grave consequences of his act.

Dispatch from Washington yesterday unofficially speaks of the postponement of the draft as necessary for a few days to complete the return of State quotas.

Yesterday was unsettl d, but closing with a advance of nearly 6 cents, at 241¾.

The burning of the store ship Brandywine, at Norfolk, the government loses over a million dollars in stores and clothing.

The other half of the 16th corps, we presume, will remain in Western Tennessee, as necessary for a few days to complete the return of State quotas.

The Spanish Ministry has issued fresh instructions with respect to vessels passing the fortress of Tarifa, to prevent their being fired on.

General Prim left Madrid on the 13th of August for Oviedo. He was accompanied by a numerous crowd as far as the railroad station.

The result of the general elections in Belgium is a subject of congratulation among the Paris journals of every shade of liberal opinion.

A dreadful fire broke out on Monday, the 15th of August, at Limoges, France, and was only subdued on the 16th. From one hundred and twenty to one hundred and fifty houses were consumed.

NEW-YORK CITY, Aug. 31, 1864.

For the past few days the news from Chicago has been of paramount interest to New Yorkers. What would be done at the Democratic Convention? Would the Woods, fresh from their traitorous plottings and gambling shambles, rule at the councils of murderdom, or would Dean Richmond and his clique carry the day at Chicago? Men met on the streets to discuss the merits of Horatio Seymour and a peace platform or to wonder if McClellan would consent to run as the champion of an armistice and Northern humiliation. Two days have passed and we have heard of the great crowd of would-be president makers which thronges your city, and that McClellan has the inside track for nomination; last night we read Gov. Seymour's speech in which he apologized for the rebellion and insults the soldiers of the Union. This morning's papers contain the platform which has been fabricated and adopted and at noon to day we learn from the bulletins that General George B. McClellan was nominated as Democratic candidate for President of the United States on the first ballot.

The news of the nomination takes no one by surprise, for it has long been the policy to run in New York election. Monday that the hero of the spade would be the nominee of the Copperheads. Republicans, and it would seem that all ingenuous men, have either experienced or read enough of McClellan to know how little he appreciates the crisis which is upon this nation, and how far short he comes in point of ability to the requirements of the hour. But the majority of the people have felt obliged to deprec te his gentle generalship, as against the rebels, and to dread his unfitness in military career, as commander-in-chief of the armies of this war. If the proclamation be not faithfully observed.

THE RIGHT TO BE-R ARMS.

The journals of the Copperhead persuasion are just now making a great outcry about the interference of the "tyrants at Washington," with the right to bear arms—a right secured, of they allege, by the Constitution. The text of their journals is that several boxes of guns and revolvers have been seized in Indiana; and Gen Heintzelman has forbidden for the present, the transmission of weapons and ammunition, in his district.

It is true, as the complainants allege, that the Constitution secures to the people the right to have weapons. European despots deprived their subjects of old, of this right for fear it might be used against themselves, and as ours was to be a free nation, the provision was inserted, that this right should not be taken away.

But what is the right? In what does it consist? It amounts to about this, as we understand it: Every man may have his shotgun, rifle, revolver, or pocket pistol, according to his fancy, for certain well understood purposes. What are these purposes? He may wish to shoot ducks, crows, hawks, owls, pigeons, woodchucks, prairie hens or wolves, bears, wildcats, or possibly tame cats, if they disturb him of nights; and he may use his shotgun upon any of these or other varmints. Yet not even in this direction without some limitations. He may not shoot rats in Chicago! If he does that he is liable to have a police officer tap him on the shoulder and trot him off to the station house, walk up before Justice O'Malley or some other "Justice" aforesaid, to pay over a fine of a few dollars for his liberty. He is liable to a fine of five dollars if he shoot even a little bird from one of the shade trees before his door. So that the "Constitutional" right to bear arms is not without some illiberal drawbacks, even in a small way.

So he may wish to use a rifle to kill deer, or bears, or lions, or elephants, or anacondas; but he must not shoot deer in June and some other months in Northern Illinois, else the Audubon Club will be after him. He may in certain cases use his revolver upon men as well as beasts. His right to own it, to load it, and put it under his pillow at night, so as to persuade himself and wife that a burglar will not come after their spoons and repeater, that night, in face of such danger, will be unquestioned by the law. And if he should fire upon one and kill him, the law will let him go, under the plea that he was defending his castle. The law has gone further than this. One man shot another in the streets of Washington City for certain domestic offenses; and he as a General in the army of the Union today. No man may own a gun to carry in militia trainings; and if a recruit were to offer himself, ride in hand, to the National army; if he were a sound man, and his gun a good one, it is believed that neither would now be rejected. It is fearful, in short, to contemplate. But to what be is wholly, or the Constitution does him no more good than so much worn out dimity. Suppose Tom, Dick, and Harry, three scalawags, associate themselves together in the ancient business of highway robbery; and stop Wilbur F. Storey and Clement C. Vallandigham on their way home from an O. A. K. Lodge meeting—with your "money or your life!" their right to bear arms under the Constitution would come to a sudden end as soon as the Sheriff's posse could get at them. So if certain "Democrats," full of faith in peace and McClellan, conspire to overthrow the "tyranny of Abraham Lincoln," regularly elected President of the United States, by engaging in the pastime of shooting provost marshals, soldiers in blue, and "inaugurating a revolution," their right to bear arms under the Constitution has reached a limit where it is liable to be cut suddenly short. In fact, they have no right to bear arms for any such purpose. They can bear arms to sustain the Government; or for purposes indifferent to the Government, but they must not bear arms to overthrow it. The Constitution authorizes nobody to engage in its own destruction; it would be the biggest fool of a constitution the world ever saw, if it had.

It is true that the Constitution says nothing about the limitations to the right it confers. But that matters nothing. It leaves that point to Legislatures and courts. It authorizes the right generally, and trusts the limitations to the proper powers. Our Constitution of Independence leaves the right of all men to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." But if a man seeks his "happiness" by marrying two wives, the law claps him in the penitentiary for bigamy. If he uses his "liberty" to whack his neighbor over the head with a shillelah, his liberty becomes that of pounding stone at the Bridewell; if he breaks the man's skull his right to "life" is that short part of it which intervenes between the act and the hempen rope of which end he dangles.

We predict therefore that no great results will come of the howl over a violated Constitution in the premises. You cannot gather grapes together in arm masses of men for violence and revolution. The Constitution of the country does not authorize you to do it, and the constitution of law and common sense will grab your weapons where it finds them; and you too, if you put yourselves without the pale of the law.

A New Complication.

In the year 1846 the United States made a treaty with New Granada, South America, by which the neutrality of the Isthmus of Panama was guaranteed. Peru, a friendly country, calls upon the United States of Columbia, formerly known as New Granada, to prevent Spain from transporting her troops across the Isthmus for the purpose of making war upon Peru. Columbia, knowing that she has not the strength to resist or prevent Spain from thus transporting her troops, calls upon the Government of the United States of America to fulfill the guaranty entered into by the above mentioned treaty. Our government finds no difficulty in determining that it is our plain duty to carry out the obligations set forth in the treaty whenever a demand shall be made by the proper party; and in the solution of the latter part of this proposition was found the only doubt or cause for hesitancy. The matter was referred to the Attorney General, who, upon thorough consideration and examination of the facts, finds that New Granada and the United States of Columbia are one and the same government; so that we must send troops and vessels of war, if need be, to maintain our treaty and prevent Spain from transporting troops across the Isthmus.

A Nut for the Peace Democracy and Napoleon to Crack.

Everybody knows that by "peace" the rebels mean their recognition "independence or extermination" is their watchword. Their independence includes a line of division. Dismemberment of the Union violates every treaty with France of April 30, 1803, ceding Louisiana to the United States. Art. 1 of that treaty stipulates: "The inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages and immunities of citizens of the United States." Marbois, Bonaparte's secretary, and the negotiator of the treaty, state that Bonaparte with his own hand drew up this third article.

Large portions of the Louisiana Purchase, with the inhabitants thereof, have been, from time to time, "incorporated in the Union of the United States." Other portions of the territory and inhabitants have not been as yet so incorporated. It would be in derogation of the treaty to sever the Union before the entire territory shall be so incorporated. The process is now going on since 1803, forming and admitting States from that purchase. Until all the territory has been erected into States and so such admitted, the inhabitants are not possessed of "all the rights, advantages and immunities of citizens of the United States." The United States are therefore barred by this treaty from consenting to any division of the Union.

Neither can France, according to the treaty, do any act recognizing such a division of the Union, until all the territory shall have been thus incorporated. The United States and France are mutually bound to each other to preserve, intact, the Union so far as respects the stipulations of this treaty until all the territory shall have been thus absorbed.

Again, the VI. article of the Constitution provides that the "supreme law of the land is the Constitution, the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made or which shall be made." Treaties ante-dating the Constitution are held by that instrument sacred and inviolable. The provision of the treaty of the Louisiana Purchase to which we have adverted becomes as valid and binding as the Constitution, in fact is a part of the Constitution.

A division of the Union involves the momentous question as to who shall have the key of the Mississippi. In dependence would be of no account to the rebels without it. The question of slavery fades into utter nothingness in comparision, with either section, as to who holds that key. Every section of empire embracing the Mississippi, from the days of La Salle, who was the first to propose to the French King the magnificent plan of holding the mouth of the Mississippi along with the mouth of the St. Lawrence, the two great rivers linked together by the great lakes, as the axis of empire, interior and back of the colonies, down to the present time, has contemplated as vital the possession of the mouth of the Mississippi. We had difficulty enough and threatened disunion with the Southern States when they had possession of the right bank, and both banks below 31 degrees.

Official statements show that the Union at the close of the present century will have a population of one hundred millions. The Valley of the Mississippi contains now over half of the entire present population, and must have at that period more than fifty millions.

☞ Mr. Pendleton, the Copperhead candidate for Vice-President, sought to render the Executive powerless on the apprehension of the three Baltimore Police Commissioners, by a resolution introduced into the House of Representatives, December 10th, 1861, declaring that the habeas corpus could only be suspended by Congress. The resolution was laid on the table—yeas, 103; nays, 36; the mover and Vallandigham being among the latter. Another clogging resolution by him was tabled, December 16, 1861. February 20, 1862, he introduced a resolution declaring Vallandigham's arrest unconstitutional. The House rejected it—yeas, 67; nays, 77. July 31, 1861, he offered a resolution on State Equality and Emancipation—ruled out of order by the speaker. Mr. Pendleton's efforts in Congress were not conspicuous, but always in the secession interest.

☞ James Guthrie was eleven votes ahead of Geo. H. Pen leton on the first ballot at Chicago for Vice President, and would have received the nomination on the next by a great majority. But he had once professed to be in favor of the war for the Union, and that killed him. Pendleton—who never lifted a finger against the rebels—was unanimously nominated on the next ballot. We think Vallandigham should have been entitled with the platform, but he must have the Vice President also.

☞ The Pittsburghers have taken up the coal question in earnest. They are determined to check the extortionate demand of the diggers, who are now receiving five cents per bushel for mining, and demand eight. A few years ago they were said to get two cents a bushel for mining. Meetings of coal producers, dealers and consumers, on a large scale, have been held, and the determination fixed to keep the price of coal at or below ten cents. Meetings of the citizens of Pittsburgh and Allegheny have been called to secure their co-operation in this movement. The citizens along the Ohio are vitally interested in the struggle between the miners and owners of coal lands. The result will have a material influence on the price of coal in this market during the winter.

☞ The Dayton Journal states that Fernando Wood, in a free frenzy, during his speech, made recently in that city, said that if by offering up his life he could stop the bloodshed that is now afflicting the country, he would cheerfully do so. An appreciative Irishman in the crowd earnestly responded —"It wud be dasired chape."

☞ The Chicago Convention have obeyed their old masters at Richmond about as well as they could. The Wasp told them that if they could not nominate Buell, McClellan was next best. As Buell was not available, it is to be hoped that the Richmond masters will be lenient towards the Democrats, who followed the Richmond programme as closely as possible.

☞ The Kearsarge is on her way home. The Iroquois takes her place. Capt. Winslow and his gallant officers and crew will have a glorious welcome home. Can't he pick up the Tallahassee on his way hither?

☞ Gen. Paige could not understand why Col. Anderson surrendered Fort Gaines. Doubtless Col. Anderson cannot now understand why Gen. Paige has surrendered Fort Morgan.

Attempt of Rebel Prisoners to Escape from Elmira.

The Rochester Express says: From Mr. Dean, who arrived from Elmira last evening, we learn that an attempt has been made by the rebel prisoners in Elmira to escape from their confinement. They had managed to dig a trench under ground a distance of some forty feet past the enclosure of the grounds, and under the hospital building. The rebels who were engaged in the work had been at work in the trench, and were aiming for the latter's tent. The dirt was only about two and a half feet high and about three feet wide. One guard, and only two was would get in at a time. They had no tools to work in with, and how they managed to get so far in is, apparently only a mystery.

FROM SHERMAN'S ARMY.

Just Before the Battle—The Great Flank Movement—Sherman's Plan and How it was Executed.

[From our Special Correspondent.]
In the Field on Camp Creek, Ga., August 29th, 1864.

The battle which is imminent has not yet been fought, but as we have swung out into the open air away from the old earthworks about Atlanta, and have cut loose from our line of supplies, and depots, and forts, and gone and all that sort of thing, I will venture you a short letter that an opportunity to reach the States may be improved. It may serve to explain events of which the readers of the TRIBUNE will probably be apprised officially and by telegraph by the time this is in type.

On the evening of the 23d, Kilpatrick returned from his expedition around and in the rear of the enemy's position. Information obtained by it in relation to the position and movements of the enemy, determined Gen. Sherman to execute another of his movements by the flank. It will be borne in mind that our position, at that time, was, as I have stated in former letters, in a line extending from the Howard House, near the Augusta Railroad, in a curved course around the north and west sides of Atlanta, said line cut by a straight line southeast to and along the West Point Railroad. The 4th corps held the extreme left of this line, and the 23d corps its extreme right, which rested south of the Utoy Creek. The whole line of the enemy was heavily intrenched, and in length was some twenty-two miles. The main army of the Tennessee held the center. Both armies had worked so faithfully, and after but little sleep for so many days and nights, that it was obvious that the party who should elect to assault the other's works with unusual vigor and confidence, without doubt, would suffer a tremendous loss of life and limb. Putting assaults out of the strategy of our campaign, the offensive operations left for Gen. Sherman were two. The first was to dig the enemy out—unearth him—by the regular steps and approaches of a siege, or connected rifle pits on the charge of assault and glory art. The second was by a flank movement, to force the rebels out of their works, and either give or get a battle in the field. Sherman selected the latter plan. Just how, at what particular point, and when he will strike the blow, is immaterial at this time. The troops having been filled with such rations, forage and ordnance as it was proposed to use, the movement commenced. A retrograde line of works was made from the left of the 15th corps' position, a little south of west of the city. Into this line, which was to cover the left flank of the army, the 16th and 17th corps were moved early in the night of the 20th. During the same night and simultaneously with the movement of the 16th and 17th corps, the 4th corps was withdrawn and moved to the rear of the right center. The 20th corps was moved into a new position at the Chattahoochee. By these movements it will be perceived our troops vacated all the works on the North side of Atlanta, and so much of those on the west side as reached to the left of the 15th corps, a point nearly opposite to the southernmost suburbs of the city. These movements were so well planned, so promptness and skill and were successful without the loss of a single life. The whole of the country between the Chattahoochee and Atlanta was thus uncovered, including of course two railroad from the river to the city. All this was done, by, into the enemy. The troops remained in such position until the night of the 26th, when it was reported from this Wheeler had come over at Sayre. A cavalry force was immediately sent in pursuit. It was reported from this Wheeler had twelve pieces of artillery. The 20th corps moved out, and came into line on the right of the 23d. Gen. Howard, with the 4th corps, stopped on Sunday night eight miles from Lebanon, at the house of Norman Welch, a rebel recruiting officer. Gen. Howard had a force detached to a cavalry, to intercept Wheeler, who was driving the enemy's cavalry before him, and who were expected to pass that way. Gen. Howard captured pretty much all the party, who were returning to Lebanon.

Part of Sherman's command entered Covington, and others dashed out for the purpose of assassinating the colored civilians stationed there under Gen. Thomas. Considering of one or sixty men. We learn that some six of Wheeler's men were overtaken by their pursuers, who fought with great bravery and determination. Capt Thornton behaved with much skill, coolness and gallantry. Finding the fight several of the citizens of Lebanon joined. When our's men by firing on the colored citizens first, two shots at Captain Thornton. Lebanon is as vile a den of rebels as there is in the country, and the citizens who participated in the affair should be made examples of immediately. During the attack a party of rebels came to the house of Dorcas Hodges, where Mr. Hodges was staying, and endeavored to capture both Mr. Hodges and Mr. Carnes, but fortunately they were not visible.

THE COPPERHEAD CONVENTION.

Extracts from Disloyal Speeches.

Our railroad contemporary makes the following extracts from the speeches of the late Copperhead Convention:

Fernando Wud (the Amindab Sleek—the gracious peace angel of the Convention), benignantly spread his palms from the balcony of the Sherman House, like the Pope pleasing the people, and blasely perorated as follows:

We call for peace, God of our fathers Grant us peace, [Amen] peace in our hearts and at the altar; peace in our firesides and on our office and shores; peace for the beleaguered cities and the hosts that wait around them; peace for the widows and orphans, for the shaking and the sick, and the chiseled; peace for the bleeding land. Speed the great time for peace.

Ben Allen, of New York, was kind enough to inform us: "Slavery is not the cause of the war; but the Abolitionists are." To remove the cause you must remove the Abolitionists. There is not a secessionist per se in the whole South."

Mr. Whiting, a Copperhead spiritualist, "wanted to know if his hearers were going to submit to conscription to fight their Southern brethren." He denounced the war as "a war of invasion."

Henry Clay Dean didn't like Little Mac. When asked if he would support him if nominated, he said: "Before God, fellow citizens, we have one idiot in the Presidential chair; don't let us put another in it."

The Rynders said before the Invincible Club:

"After three years petty despotism, I stand a free man before free people. I know the South are gallant, chivalrous and noble as ever trod ever created. I am sorry the South have taken the steps they have, but God knows they had just cause to act as they did act. He did not consider it a shame to make peace with a power who had given the right of secession."

"By G—d we must have McClellan nominated. We must put a stop to this d—d war."—Dean Richmond.

W. W. O'Brien, of Peoria, spoke: "We must struggle for peace, liberty, and our rights. Against us is fraud, violence and murder. The people tire of the tyrant's rule. We will have a free election or a free fight; and we warn those in power that their blood will pay for any infraction of our rights."

Sunset Cox indulged in an inflammatory but grandiloquent strain. He exclaimed:

"We are for peace. We deprecate war; but if there are things even worse than war, and that is a base and cowardly submission to wrong. Let us die no longer, but meet the first outrage of our constitutional rights as our fathers met the aggression of the King."

"The sun is an unholy light. Soon the act is to be drawn that will gather in the half million more into the bloody harvest for human flesh. No, my God, let us demand a cessation of the sacrifice and the shedding of more blood. Hear our emphatic verdict for peace, and let the great Republic that the dominoes come from earnest hands and hearts prepared."—Mobocracy.

Mr. Johnson, claiming to be a gospel monger from Missouri, hinted strongly at a Western Confederacy. He said:

"If it shall be necessary in the settlement of our difficulties in a few years to form a combination by themselves, I think we can be just as safe, just as well protected, and just as free and happy under a Union of Republics as we have been under a Union of States. I want to see this whole continent knitted together by a great union of the right of the 35th corps, and then moved eastward across the Ulay and Camp Creeks. The night was very dark, and occasional showers made the roads very slippery. The troops moved, however, with alacrity, and by noon Sherman's flanking army was in position to threaten the communication of its position of the previous evening. At the same time the right of the 23d corps which had been recently, was brought into line. This much describes the movements so far. I write you from a camp three miles west of Fairburn Station, on the west point, or Montgomery railroad. I have been up two days and one and a night without sleep, with orders to eat breakfast at 3 to be saddled at four in the morning, and get such sleep as should be had when it can.

FROM NASHVILLE.

Hood's Army—Political Union Convention—Wheeler's Raid.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]
NASHVILLE, Sept. 1.

From the front there is as yet nothing. We have had no communications from Sherman since he left his position on the West and started for the South of the doomed city of Atlanta; nor does it seem likely till the announcement reaches us that Hood has been overwhelmed, and the campaign in Georgia ended, by the entire destruction of the rebel military rule.

Hood's army consists of at least one-half militia—that is, boys, old men, officers of the State, necks, that would will not be very terrible antagonists, when contrasted to veterans; and our men, when confronting them in open fields, will not be long in dispersing them. However, Hood has disposed of his forces very judiciously. Veterans and recruits are mingled together with great care, so as to render the whole force, in the highest possible degree effective. Besides, he will fight; and as that is just to Sherman's hand, a battle, if it has not taken place, will not be long delayed. The result of a general engagement cannot be doubtful; if it be overshadowed in the several struggles which took place in the latter part of last month, when Hood took—as he will never again be enabled to take—the offensive. The bloody reunions of the 20th, 22d and 28th of July will be repeated, not only with interest but usury.

I do not think we shall hear from Sherman for several days; perhaps not for a week; but when news does come, it will be such as will cheer the heart of every patriot, and strike dismay in every traitor. It will startle the tongues of those who expect McClellan to be elected through the aid of rebel victories.

POLITICAL.

The nomination of McClellan and Pendleton gives to rebel sympathizers here unmitigated satisfaction. Some time since, I wrote you that the rebels here greeted "Little Mac" to even Vallandigham; and such is the case. They say of it as that as it is stronger than to open peace men. And that, when elected, he will be just such an instrument as they need. He is a weak man, and can be monipered to suit them. They justly set the questions, If he is not for peace; if the platform don't mean the recognition of "our independence," what did Vallandigham give in the Convention? Why did he say that there was no difference in principle, as to the resolutions; only of phraseology? I confess they have the best of the argument; and no one can successfully dispute the correctness of their conclusions.

I am writing this in a rebel town; and just at the conclusion of the above sentence, two well known rebel sympathizers came in, conversing upon the political status of affairs, and as they were speaking loudly in the presence of at least twenty persons, I did not think it improper to note what they said:

Mr. A—Well, how do you like the ticket?

Mr. B.—It is just the nomination I should have made had I been able to dictate.

Mr. A—What will be the result of success in your opinion?

B.—The independence of the South will be acknowledged, if not on the battle ground, we will present to McClellan the alternatives of war or separation; and when he finds we mean live with a North, he will yield. If McClellan is elected I believe Vallandigham will be in the Cabinet.

UNION CONVENTION.

The Union Convention assembles here to-day. Gov. Wheeler said will prevent many delegates from coming, nevertheless it will be large.

WHEELER'S RAID.

Wheeler is in this vicinity with about 5,000 men. His forces are scattered along the road between here and Tullahoma, destroying the track wherever it is possible, but doubtless avoiding a fight. It was, evidently, the intention of Forrest and Roddy to cross from below and co-operate with Wheeler; but the Tennessee is too high to admit of this; but it is now asserted that Forrest has succeeded in getting over at Savannah; but of that I have no certain knowledge.

How do the rebels sympathizers obtain such an intimate knowledge of the movements of their friends? More than a week since rebels here disclosed to those whom they deemed their friends, that Forrest would be in this section soon; and now we know officially that he was behind Sherman's rear for the high water. The manner in which this communication between annesioned rebels here and open rebels in the South is kept up is really astonishing.

Wheeler crossed the river above Kingston, and made for Sparta, and thence moved down to McMinnville, and in the direction of this city. His force consists of the divisions of Wharton, Kelly and Howard's, and the independent brigade of Waltham, in all, from 4,000 to 5,000 men and 12 pieces of artillery. Gen. Rousseau is fully prepared to check the rebels, but as his force is all infantry, he can do but little in pursuing his adversary.

If, however, Wheeler does not get out in 24 hours he will find a large body of cavalry on his rear. There are now in this vicinity operating and moving, and in a very short time they will be on the war path.

I will not predict anything of prospect, as before this reaches you you will be apprised of certainties by telegraph; and will confine myself with promising something definite next.

An extra, published in this city, a few minutes since, contains the following:

Gen. Forrest Station and Mr. Cheairs, Chief Clerk of the Post office at the place, arrived and left last night. They were in Lebanon during the raid of Wheeler's cavalry. It was reported that Wheeler's headquarters were at Sparta. A large force was left at Lebanon, and it was reported from this Wheeler had twelve pieces of artillery. The 20th corps moved out, and came into line on the right of the 23d. Gen. Howard, with the 4th corps, stopped on Sunday night eight miles from Lebanon, at the house of Norman Welch, a rebel recruiting officer. Gen. THE HISTORY OF

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE.

The Formula from which it is Prepared Discovered by the Inventor in Experimenting for his own Health.

ITS HISTORY.

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE.

This valuable medicine is the discovery of the originator of the world renowned "Coe's Cocoa Nut Oil Hair," while experimenting for his own health. He had been for years troubled with severe dryness in the stomach, which baffled the skill of the physicians, and at times he was obliged to be put under the influence of chloroform until they gave way. He had tried all the known remedies used in such cases, without avail, and had often expressed the belief that some of the poisons would kill him. Fortunately, however, he commended this medicine, which, to his great joy, perfectly controlled the trouble, and to-day he does not fear death from it. Its action on the stomach was so quick and powerful, it occurred to him it would prove an important remedy for Dyspepsia. Consequently, he prevailed upon a friend who had been obliged to live on Graham Bread and the like, out of diet for over six years, to try it. The patient, at his request, ate a hearty meal, and, as usual, it lay, as he declared, as a load on his stomach. The Cure was administered, which relieved almost instantaneously, and troubled her no more. She followed it up every meal, eating whatever she chose, taking the cure whenever she felt any trouble, and after using less than one bottle, she declared she had no Dyspepsia. Mr. Coe, elated with this success, but still wishing further proof, advertised to give to any two-by-four of the worst cases of Dyspepsia in the city. The applicants were many times that number, who each took away a bottle; and twenty-five of the worst cases, selected from the number, testified to its virtues, so that they have been cured of Dyspepsia, and not one has used more than one bottle; and to the Dyspeptic sufferer who may read this unvarnished story "too large," we would say, if you will take the trouble to write to us, we will furnish you the evidence of any of the twenty-five. With such convincing proof of its efficacy, we feel justified in placing it before the public, fully believing that it will cure ninety-nine out of every one hundred who suffer from any derangement of the stomach or bowels. It is now compounded with a view to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to, as are those of the bestowal in the marks, but from the control of the stomach, we include on our list of cures to be performed, all those ills which have their origin in a disordered stomach and bowels, among which are Dyspepsia, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cramp in Stomach, Fever and Ague, Pain in the Stomach, Pain in the Bowels, Acidity of Stomach, General Debility, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Colic Pains, Dysentery, Constipation.

Read what J. H. Robinson, M. D., writes: Being his Family Physician, I am prepared to say, that, so far as the above statement refers to Coe's Cure, as curing from cramp in the stomach, and his finding a remedy in his Dyspepsia Cure, it is correct. Having also made some use of it in my practice, and knowing its ingredients, I will say this is a good vegetable medicine, and perfectly safe.

J. H. ROBINSON, M. D.

We add below some Testimonials from our neighbors and townsmen, to which we ask your careful attention.

TESTIMONIALS.

[From the Pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Madison, Conn.]

I have used Coe's Dyspepsia Cure in my family, and can with pleasure testify to its value as a medicine.

Madison, Conn., June 30th, 1864.

[A Voice from home that, with our City Papers.]

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 19, 1864.

Messrs. Editors: Allow me, through your columns, to acknowledge my gratitude for the benefit I have received from the use of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. Although I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, he first dose gave instant relief, and one ounce has enabled me to eat anything I please with no pain. I have now stopped using the medicine, as I no longer need it.

PALMYRA LYMAN.

MADISON, Conn., June 30th, 1864.

From the benefit derived by the use of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure in my family, I am prepared to say that I never intend to be without it, and advise all who are afflicted with Dyspepsia to try it.

PHILANDER LEWIS.

MR. COE: The bottle of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure you gave me has healed up yourself a great concern to it. I have only used half a bottle, and can eat pine apple short cake or any like side, without trouble. It acts like a charm. The relief it affords is instantaneous.

JANE A. LOWBEE.

NEW HAVEN, June 18th, 1864.

Those who know my constitution, what my condition has been for the last thirty years, will believe with me that a medicine which will reach my case will reach almost anyone. Coe's Dyspepsia Cure has enabled me to eat anything I please, and it is very safe from I now have to use the medicine. It relieved me in an instant when I was in great pain. My whole system is being strengthened day by day.

ANN E. BAGGOTT.

New Haven, June 20th, 1864.

IMPORTANT TO TRAVELERS.

While journeying on the cars, my stomach became deranged, causing severe pain in my head. Had it been on the water, it would have terminated sea sickness. A lady sitting by me, knowing my condition, reached out a bottle, saying, "Take a swallow." I did so, and in less than five minutes my trouble was ended. The medicine was "Coe's Dyspepsia Cure," and from the effect it has upon the stomach, and what I have learned of it since, I think it must be an excellent remedy for Sea-Sickness and Dyspepsia.

MRS. SAMUEL FIELD.

NEW HAVEN, June 20th, 1864.

Messrs. C. G. Clark & Co.—Gentlemen: I desire to make known the almost instantaneous effects of "Coe's Dyspepsia Cure" in cases of cholera morbus. I had been for twenty-four hours purging at the stomach and bowels, every fifteen minutes. I went into your drug store to purchase some remedy, and had already been told that it was a good remedy for Dysentery. My pallid face and my weakness at once attracted the attention of the clerk in charge, and he asked me at once, "What is the matter?" I replied, "I have been for twenty-four hours vomiting and purging, and I am unable to stand or walk, from weakness, and this deadly sickness at my stomach completely prostrates me." He produced a bottle of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure, saying, "Take a large swallow of that; it is now 11 o'clock; take another after dinner."

From the moment I took that first dose of the medicine, my sickness at the stomach was gone; its effect was instantaneous. In an hour I ate my dinner with as good a relish as ever hungry man partook (as I was well cleaned out of food), and followed by a few doses of Cure, I have not suffered a particle of inconvenience since I took the remedy.

Its action was so wonderful and so immediate, that I could hardly believe the evidences of my own senses, and I desire to publicly make known these facts, that the whole world may avail themselves of its use. Like bread, it should find a place in every one's house; and I believe that no one should go away from home without a bottle of it in his pocket, or where it could be quickly made available.

Truly yours, GEO. L. DRAKE.

One of the Twenty-five.

NEW HAVEN, June 17th, 1864.

MR. COE—Sir: Rarely have been troubled with the Dyspepsia for more or twelve months, I have taken the usual kinds of medicines, which have done me no good. I saw your advertisement of a medicine to cure the dyspepsia. I have tried it, and found it to be the medicine. The first dose (the 7th of June) that I took, relieved me in one minute. I have taken it three or four times, but have had no distressing one ring in my stomach since taking the first 15 drops, although before, I could not eat a meal, and sometimes had more than three or four hours' restful, without distressing pain.

Respectfully, J. F. WOODRUFF.

NEW HAVEN, June 17th, 1864.

MR. COE—Dear Sir: The bottle of dyspepsia medicine I received from you gave instantaneous relief. I only used it when my food distressed me. It was about like taking two doses to-day, one to-morrow then every other day, increasing the quantity of food and decreasing the medicine, until I was enabled to eat without taking anything at all. My case was an extraordinary one, having suffered for seven years. I now consider myself cured, and by only using one bottle of medicine in the space of two months. The dose was a teaspoonful.

FOR THE HAIR!

In introducing to the public our Preparation for the Hair, we have but little ourselves to say, preferring to rest it upon your scientific entirety upon its own merits, in every respect, leaving you to decide as to its virtue, rather than upon the glowing testimonials and puffs of unknown persons, which are in most cases either bought or fictitious; fully assured, that if the explicit directions which accompany each package are carefully followed, none will be loath to complain, and none who will be dissatisfied.

It is perfectly harmless, containing no injurious ...
...that would be at all injurious if used separately; it is the result of years of experimenting, having been perfected and purified by a process of steam distillation heretofore unknown—by means of which the invent...
...ors have succeeded in forming a perfectly pure and transparent preparation, entirely free from oil, that is not a dye, and has no deleterious properties, combining a clear extract of all those ingredients necessary for restoring the Hair to its natural color and those emollient, invigorating properties that will prevent its decay, promote its growth, and render it luxuriant as nature ordained it. In view of the testimony which we have received in our own knowledge of the article, WE CLAIM FOR IT, THAT IT WILL

Permanently Restore the Hair and Beard to its Natural Color.

To Cause Hair to Grow on Bald Heads,

(when the roots are not entirely gone.)

To Remove Dandruff and all other Accumulations.

To keep the Head and Hair Clean.

To relieve all Irritations of the Scalp.

To restore its Natural and Healthy Action.

To prevent the Hair from Falling Off.

To promote its Rapid Growth.

To render it Soft and Lustrous.

After a few applications, the hair may be polished with the brush and YAN HAND to any degree of brilliancy. A little can said, "I find it; it makes my hair feel so soft and shiny."

By its faithful application, Gray and Faded Hair and Beard will be restored to their natural color, and none of the troubles and dangers of turning red or brittle incurred, which always are attendant upon the use of Dyes. Bald heads will be covered with a luxurious growth, in all instances, where the roots are not entirely dead. If this is the case, no remedy in the known world will ever cause the Hair to grow; it is a physical impossibility. But if the roots or scalp are simply diseased and unhealthy, then Clark's Restorative will be found an invaluable agent. Dandruff cannot exist where the Restorative is applied, for its very nature is healing and cleansing. The hair is prevented from falling off, because the ...
...ots and roots are strengthened and stimulated to a ...
...healthy action, which not only prevents its decay, but ...
...also the cause of its rapid growth. Certain articles in its composition, mixed in by our steam distilling process, make it superior and unsurpassed as a dressing, gladdening the world up a notch in equal or any preparation which is a mixture of Oils and Dressing combined.

There is no dirty sediment to be shaken up before use, as is the case with most of the Hair Restoratives now in the market, as our process of manufacture extracts the full strength of the ingredients, leaving no unclean gums nor mucilage, no compounds, to soak up and saturate the Hair and scalp.

It is delightfully perfumed, and does not turn rancid in warm weather, but keeps the Hair sweet and clean, rendering it particularly desirable in ladies wearing heavy tresses. It is also admirably adapted for Dressing Children's Hair, as it consistently cleans it and of all impurities, and makes it soft and healthy. We might publish the opinions and recommendations of our neighbors and townsmen, as well as of our leading ministers and theologians, of which we have in our possession, but as we said in the outset, this practice has been so much abused, that we entirely refrain from using them, preferring to leave it entirely to its merit, as to accomplish to you, stronger proof of its reliability, and our own confidence in the article.

We are perfectly willing to trust the results to its merits, knowing it is prepared chemically and scientifically, to meet the wants, promote the health, preserve and beautify the Hair, and in fact, make the human hair of all ages, "from the cradle to the grave." Will you not restore those gray and faded locks and beard to their natural color, clean your head and scalp from dandruff and keep your hair soft, brilliant and luxurious, when you can do so at so trifling an expense?

Early Delivery of the Tribune in Future—The New Press.

The city patrons of the TRIBUNE have for some time past suffered serious inconvenience, arising out of the late hour at which their papers were delivered. It has been for months past impossible to supply the demand within the hours usually allotted to the production of a morning paper. Our four cylinder press—as large as that owned by any other establishment in the city—was set running at an early hour, and kept at work often times till the day had far advanced into afternoon, yet the call was unsatisfied. Thousands of business and working men were unable to procure their papers before leaving home in the morning, and numerous disconsolate, or refreshed from quenching their thirst at the counter, some of them taking other papers which they did not prefer, except as they were compelled by the stress of circumstances to use them. This trouble exists no longer. The eight cylinder press—the capacity of which is greater than any other in the city—is now at work, and our patrons have in future no cause for uneasiness. In the series he was robbed of about $30. No arrests have yet been made.

KICKED.—Yesterday morning a man named James Maloney, while endeavoring to instil ideas of locomotion into the mind of a balky horse on Michigan avenue, near Twenty-ninth street, by means of an ignited stump of cedar, received a severe kick in the abdomen from the restive animal. The man suffers extreme pain, and though a brute in the extreme, it is thought by some that the horse has sustained severe internal contusion.

INQUEST—FATAL STABBING.—Coroner Warner coroided on Sunday the inquest on the body of the sailor, John Larmont, whose death from stabbing, received at the hands of a fellow countryman named Angus McLeod, was reported in the TRIBUNE of yesterday. Drs. Bartlett, Burke and Hinkley, on the post mortem examination, found that the knife had entered the left lung below the scrotum rib, causing death. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict accordingly, and McLeod, who is only nineteen years of age, was immediately after the commission of the deed.

CAPSIZED.—Yesterday morning a couple of row boats on the North Branch, each containing two men, came into collision, and as a result of the impact was the destruction of the equilibrium of one of the craft and the transfer of its inmates to the water. Save the privilege of swimming to their garments, the men were rescued little damaged by their immersion. Each, however, has a realizing conception of the propriety of "washing his hands in the sea" and the inexpressibility of commiserating sentiments to the boats of the North Branch, unless entrance agents are called into requisition.

PASSING SPURIOUS MONEY.—Yesterday a seedy individual calling himself Mark L. Wyeth, was brought up in the Police Court for attempting to pass a worthless bill of the denomination of $5—on board the steamer "Chicago, Canada West." His intended victim was a clear-headed Scot to 93 Wells street. The "learned" and astute sophus of Æsculapius, Justice Ingraham, presiding, called "Justice McDonnell," held the prisoner upon a charge of forgery, and he was required to give $1,000 bail for his appearance at the next term of the Recorder's Court.

DANGEROUS COLLISION.—On Sunday morning the canal boat "Advance," loaded with stone, was run down by the schooner "Seneca Chief" in the North Branch, between Chicago & Ahnert's dry dock. The shock was so severe that the "Advance" immediately commenced to fill with water, and consequently, to prevent the sinking of the vessel, the Chief. The North Branch was never too deep at this point, but now it is absolutely dangerous, there being many feet of water over the stone and sunken debris. Captain Bergh, the harbor master, reports that a vessel drawing no more than nine feet, cannot safely attempt the passage.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Yesterday morning, about 9 o'clock, a man whose name our reporter was unable to learn, while walking on North Wells, near Ohio street, slipped and fell on the pavement, seriously injuring her head and body. Two or three gentlemen witnessed the accident, carried her into the office of a neighboring doctor, who humanely attended to her sufferings, as soon as he was paid the pastry sum of two dollars. The gentlemen were obliged to get a wagon and have her carried to another residence, where she attended to her wants. Comment is unnecessary.

LAMENT ON THE CARS.—On Saturday a soldier named William Meeks took the Michigan Central Railroad cars at Kalamazoo, to come to this city. On the train he met the acquaintance of a fashionable damsel rejoicing in the sweet name of Cordelia De Forrest. She "stood treat" several times, and was rewarded by the smiles of the sex. Before Meeks had ate more than thirteen lunches and when he thought himself measurably secure from the effects of $12. She was soon arrested and examined. In default of $600 bail, she was sent up to await her trial in the Recorder's Court.

OPENING OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—Yesterday was opening day in the Public Schools of the city, and the streets were thronged by the majority of the school houses in the morning. The day was quite an exciting one for teachers and pupilsand an interesting one for parents and others, who in general called upon to provide new books for the children to replace those worn out or grown through. We noticed that Sherlock's store was full to running over in the afternoon.

THE WEATHER.—Yesterday, the weather, dry as you please—a little too warmly sometimes, but always showing a smiling face. The little ones will be glad to see all the rain and the murder and feather for the brushing spell. Now is the time for the country. Our world is growing yellow—if not better—daily, and soon no one will have a chance in the race of life who has not attained to that highly desirable condition—a good complexion.

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE 19TH REGIMENT.—The work of re-organizing the members of the old 19th regiment into a battalion, to serve as "Home Guard," is progressing finely. A meeting was held last night at their armory, in Lind's Block, and three companies organized and elected officers as follows:

SALE OF THE MARINE HOSPITAL AT AUCTION.—Acting under orders from Mr. Fessenden, Secretary of the Treasury, Collector Raven yesterday sold at auction at the Custom House, the Marine Hospital and grounds. About a dozen gentlemen were in attendance, one of whom invested the Hospital grant at $9,000. By an unfortunate oversight on the part of the Government, a mortgage of $1,000 was found to exist upon the property, and the amount to be paid amount of $9,000 reduced to the sum payable $10,000, at which it was knocked down to Mr. Ashley F. Jeffris. The property was sold in two lots, each, with the buildings, to the highest bidder, and to each there was a mortgage of $1,000. The Government reserves the right to remove the hospital buildings within a year, if necessary. Upon the receipt of the money the Government will execute a deed conveying to him a title of the property.

A Pleasing Incident—McClellan's Arry Vote.—On Sunday evening the 48th Iowa volunteer infantry, numbering about 300 men, and commanded by Col. H. H. Scott, marched from their camp in the vicinity of Camp Douglas to the city, and left the city for Rock Island, where it will be stationed during the exciting political campaign. The Chicago Convention. The 48th numbers about three days ago, and is one of those regiments which Democratic Democrats have been so fond of crowing over, because it was composed of Democrats. It would have been inspiriting to "Little Mac" or any other Democrat of note to have heard the reply of the Colonel to our reporter's inquiry concerning the politics of his command. Scott, "is the 48th Iowa, and every man of it is for Lincoln and for the preservation at all hazards of our glorious Union." Such a declaration was received with loud cheers. As they were ordered through the city, they were met by a procession of voters with the disciple of universal liberty pell from the banks of the Des Moines. And in not every regiment composed of staunch Democrats material is McClellan's army rose. When the history of this Democratic party is written up, what a story will shine in the record of the gallant 48th. Commanded by a Democrat, and the first regiment to declare its opposition to one who will trample the shotless-stripes would support him even in the foul depths of treason! How long can you Army vote?

A STRUCK OF DOUBTFUL WAR.—On Friday last a sub-Deacon was arrested at No. —— State street, which at one time threatened to culminate in a bigger, but finally terminated in the comedy of the following morning. It appears that a man on the corner of —— street is a photograph gallery, the proprietor of which believes in patronizing the press to an unlimited extent. He has also a department in connection therewith, which is entirely devoted to the fine arts. Among the photograph gallery was a lady in a state of undress of a nudeness. Some time ago, it was not considered proper to display such a picture in the lady's ball and took into many a window. Our sub-Deacon, however, had other views, and the lord—to steal—accordingly, and situated to other items in a Protestant style. This the watchful eye of the police did not allow, and the sub-Deacon was arrested. On the morning of the day above mentioned he received a note, by private conveyance, with cash and gilt edged, requesting him to meet the writer at a sublime shop on State street. The sub-Deacon complied with the request of the stranger, and received a note and showed the letter to the wife. She did not believe in his treatment nor regard for her feelings, and the sub-Deacon was left to his own devices. He followed the stranger, but he had followed by another man, who, as the sub-Deacon entered the street, where he could have a view of all their transactions. After the business connected with the letter was transacted, the stranger, which he learned to be a detective, showed the sub-Deacon a warrant for his arrest, and he was taken to the police station. He was released on bail, and the affair was settled by the payment of $100 to the stranger.

A SPECIMEN OF DEMOCRATIC WAR.—On Friday last a Democratic Democrat, who resides on Lake street, between Halsted and Green, was arrested by a Provost Marshal, and taken to the Provost Marshal's office, on the charge of having in his possession a quantity of arms, which he had secreted in his house. The Democrat was released on bail, and the arms were taken to the office of the Provost Marshal. The Democrat, who is a man of wealth, is a member of the Democratic Club, and is a strong supporter of the Democratic party. He is also a member of the Democratic Club, and is a strong supporter of the Democratic party. He is also a member of the Democratic Club, and is a strong supporter of the Democratic party.

COMMON COUNCIL.

An Attempt at Legislation—Miscellaneous Matters—Reports and Action Thereon—The Tunnels Under the River and Lake—Speedy Adjournment.

The Common Council met in regular session last evening.

Ald. Armstrong demanded the call of the roll at five minutes after the usual hour of half-past seven. Aldermen Comisky and Holden protested, but Ald. Armstrong persisted.

Ald. Comisky said that if the gentleman wanted to go to Springfield he was welcome to so, but should not thereby seek to prevent the Council from transacting the business.

One of the Aldermen doubted if one member had power to order the roll call.

The Corporation Counsel, who was present, delivered it as his opinion that one Alderman could command the calling of the roll, but the Council was not obliged to adjourn, the minority could still transact business unless the quorum was present, and the Council could proceed as in ordinary cases.

The Clerk then called the roll, and sixteen Aldermen were found present.

Ten minutes afterwards three other Aldermen came in, and the roll then stood as follows:

Present—Aldermen Pearce, Barrett, Gillin, Walsh, Comisky, Schermerhorn, Harris, Rafferty, Woodard, Hiscock, Holden, Van Hollen, Bond, Gastfield, Hively, Armstrong, Frances, Sun, Sullivan, Lawson, Thompson, and Gage—19.

The MINUTES of the two preceding meetings were approved as read.

PETITIONS AND COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was presented by the City Clerk, stating that the time for the return of the annual assessment rolls had expired, and it was now 8 o'clock, or thereabouts. Those who have hitherto been obliged to forego the pleasure of reading the TRIBUNE before departing for the scenes of their avocations, now can do so no longer. They have only to come up to the counting room and leave their orders, giving the hitherto precisely, so as to avoid the possibility of mistake.

To those of our patrons who have endured past inconveniences we tender our thanks. The news will be received up to the latest moment as heretofore. I will not be by closing the "outs earlier, but by working the sheets more rapidly, that we shall deviate from our position in future. We now print 16,000 per hour, and can extend those figures when needed. It will take some time—even should the present rate of increase in the number of subscribers be continued—before the capacities of our new press be unequal to the demand.

MECHANICS' ASSOCIATION.—Owing to the non-attendance of a quorum at the rooms of the Mercantile Association, there was no meeting of that body last evening.

STATE SANITARY FAIR.—The United States and American Express Companies have generously offered to carry forth packages of goods free to the Northern Fair of Sanitary. The prospects of a large attendance are good.

FIRE.—Steam early hour yesterday morning the coal office of Kellogg & Gray, doing business at the corner of Wabash and Market streets, was consumed by fire, causing $125. The fire is supposed to have owed its origin to spontaneous combustion.

FROM THE BOARD OF TRADE BATTERY.—A letter from the Chicago Board of Trade Battery was read on Change yesterday, giving an account of the performances of the battery in Kilpatrick's recent raid in the direction of Atlanta, the details of which are familiar to our readers.

ROBBERY.—Nathenial Taylor, a conductor on the State street cars, was brutaly assaulted and terribly beaten about midnight on Saturday, on State street, in the vicinity of the house kept by the notorious Harriet Lewis. He had engaged in a controversy with several parties to him unknown, and they knocked him insensible. In the series he was robbed of about $30. No arrests have yet been made.

OFF THE TRACK.—Yesterday morning switch engine No. 81, belonging to the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, while running at a low rate of speed over the street near the company's crossing, at 15th street, ran off the track, driving the forward wheels in the mud. No damage was done; after some delay the locomotive was replaced upon the line and the family railroad resumed.

KICKED.—Yesterday morning a man named James Maloney, while endeavoring to instil ideas of locomotion into the mind of a balky horse on Michigan avenue, near Twenty-ninth street, by means of an ignited stump of cedar, received a severe kick in the abdomen from the restive animal. LOCAL MATTERS.

Chicago "Bible Society."—The Board of Managers of the Chicago Bible Society will meet this (Tuesday) evening in the Lecture Room of the Methodist Church, Clark, for arranging for a Union Bible meeting, and a Convention of Agents of the Bible Society, to be held in October, at the direction of Rev W. J. R. Taylor, one of the Secretaries of the American Bible Society.

Per order of the President, ——, Sec'y.

The following letter is from Dr. J. B. Jordan, of Cincinnati, to Dr. Wilson, of Pittsburg, Penn., in answer to a letter of inquiry concerning Dr. James' abilities in the treatment of private diseases. Dr. Wilson is a brother of Dr. Jordan was associated with Dr. James:

Dr. James has had a physician to the Cincinnati Cholera Hospital during the summer of 1849 and was Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine and of Materia Medica in the American Medical Institute of Louisville, Ky., in 1850, '5 and '6. Dr. James is now, or was one hour last March, practicing in Cincinnati (only one day's travel from Chicago by the Air Line), when the aforesaid can refer to Dr. Wilson for further information.

CINCINNATI, July 5, 1864.

"DR. WILSON—DEAR SIR—In answer to your inquiries, I would say that I have known Dr. James, formerly of James' Loch Hospital, New Orleans, and now of Chicago, Illinois, for the last twelve years, and I think I may safely say that, in the line of practice, I do not know his superior. He is a man of high moral character and standing, and three eminent in this city, and in fact in the whole West. I have frequently recommended patients wanting treatment in that line to him, and in every case, so far as I could learn, they were cured, and gave him entire satisfaction. He has from the start made the study of what are Chronic Diseases a specialty, and for
